

NORDISK TIDSSKRIFT FOR KRIMINALVIDENSKAB

As of no 1/2021, Nordisk Tidsskrift for Kriminalvidenskab will be published as an online publication only. This will be celebrated by publishing an extended special feature issue, which allows for contributions from all scientific angles related to criminology. The topic is:

Deprivation of liberty and individuals deprived of liberty

The topic has a broad meaning. The articles may represent scientific standpoints relating to criminology, legal, forensic psychiatry, social scientific, sociological and other scientific approaches, and they may represent different theories, research-traditions and research methods. Historic as well as topical and development-oriented perspectives may be applied.

NTfK is a highly ranked scientific journal and uses double blind peer review.

It is recommended to contact the main editor for "author's instructions" before starting to write. The instructions include information of scope etc.

It is also a good idea to discuss the theme and orientation of the article with the editor.

NTfK publishes in Danish, Norwegian, Swedish and English. Irrespective of which language the article is published in, the author is responsible for a proper proof reading.

Deadline for the first draft ready for peer review is 1 November 2020. NTfK 1/2021 is expected to be published in March 2021. Access will be allocated to all subscribers via tidsskrift.dk.

Questions and inquiries may be directed to the main editor:

Professor Anette Storgaard, Department of Law, Aarhus University

as@law.au.dk

